

LEILANI RAASHIDA HENRY

According to Leilani Raashida Henry, “what could be slowing your momentum is all in your head and body – literally.” Leilani is a game changer who specializes in whole brain strategies for individual and collective transformation. As an executive coach, her experiential processes bring lightning speed results to tough challenges. She deepens your ability to ask your own questions and receive your own answers. Leilani sparks the hearts and minds of those who want extraordinary results aligned with their highest aspirations.

She is a licensed Educational Kinesiologist and former Director of Training and Development with Jones Inter-cable. Leilani also served as an Organizational Development Specialist at Honeywell and Lockheed Martin. She co-designed Honeywell’s first company-wide diversity, equity, and inclusion training program. She is a demonstrated thought leader in the field of Organizational Development and has been widely cited in national publications.

Regis University’s Institute on the Common Good awarded Leilani a fellowship for her work in dialogue. Her lifetime experience in the healing and performing arts is integrated into her unique approach to transformation. She created several tools to develop 21st century inclusive leaders. Leilani works with Fortune 100 companies, a range of academic institutions, small business and non-profits. She assists teams and talented leaders from opera singers to academic and corporate leaders in their ability to choose and change, to grow and develop in innovation, wellbeing, trust building, and leadership presence.

Leilani is the author of The Call of Antarctica: Exploring and Protecting Earth’s Coldest Continent. In her book, she utilizes the diaries of her late father, George W. Gibbs, Jr., who was the first person of African descent to set foot on the continent of Antarctica. She also authored the “Navigating Conflict” chapter, in Springer’s 1st edition of Management and Leadership Skills for Medical Faculty. Leilani received a B.A. from Spelman College in Atlanta and holds a master’s degree from St. Thomas University in St. Paul, MN. She calls the Rocky Mountains outside of Denver, Colorado home.